ITINERANT MASTER COURSE
IN ARCHITECTURE, MUSEOGRAPHY AND EXHIBITION DESIGN FOR ARCHAEOLOGY.
SUSTAINABLE DESIGN AND STRATEGIC ENHANCEMENT OF ARCHAEOLOGICAL HERITAGE

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS_XX EDITION 2026–2027

Art. 1: Format

The Itinerant Master in "Architecture, Museography and Exhibition Design for Archaeology. Sustainable Design and Strategic Enhancement of Archaeological Heritage" is established by the Accademia Adrianea di Architettura e Archeologia Onlus, based on the distinctive itinerant format, which entails interaction with a series of different sites, each hosting dedicated study and design workshops.

Each workshop is methodologically autonomous, reflecting the principle of diverse approaches to the relationship between Architecture and Design, Museography, Exhibition Design, and Archaeology. Consequently, the Itinerant Master proposes a sequence of eight to ten original and significant experiences at internationally renowned heritage sites, complemented by a high-level online seminar series accessible to all participants across a wide geographical área; to these is added an internship experience at highly qualified studios or institutions; as completion of the Training Path, the programme culminates in a Master's Thesis project, developed in conjunction with an internal design competition known as the "Paola Mattioli Prize," set on the Acropolis of Athens.

Art. 2: Description

In light of the growing awareness of the need for multi-scalar design interventions to address contemporary challenges facing Cultural Heritage (such as the regeneration of contexts damaged by warfare, natural disasters, and climate change; the imperative of cultural continuity and narrative coherence; the urgent demand for research and training initiatives; and the increasing expectation for sustainable design within the management processes of archaeological and cultural sites) – and in support of cultural programming policies promoted by heritage protection authorities – the Itinerant Master in "Architecture, Museography and Exhibition Design for Archaeology. Sustainable Design and Strategic Enhancement of Archaeological Heritage" is conceived as a specialist professional training course.

Its aim is to develop specific yet interdisciplinary competences capable of fostering an operational, analytical, design-oriented, and managerial relationship among architects, designers, engineer-architects, and archaeologists. Museography, as a design discipline dedicated to the optimal public engagement with cultural heritage –particularly archaeological heritage – serves as the sensitive hinge of this relationship.

Art. 3: Professional Objectives

The objective of the Traveling Master's Degree is to develop professionals

- with interdisciplinary and operational skills in the field of strategic planning for archaeological cultural heritage;
- with a management role, both as a consultant and as a structured figure within the institutions responsible for its protection and enhancement;
- with scientific, managerial, and direction skills developed through their own cultural and educational backgrounds, and articulated through knowledge of new technologies applied to the sector.

Specifically, the Master is designed to train:

- Museographer-designers specializing in the creation of cultural products such as museum and gallery exhibitions, temporary displays, event and shows design for archaeological site enhancement, open-air site musealization and upgrading, and integrated systems of products, communication, and services for visitor experience and comfort within cultural heritage contexts;
- Senior managerial staff for museums, foundations, and other institutions active in the field of archaeological and cultural heritage;
- Entrepreneurial professionals engaged in the economic management of cultural heritage valorisation processes;
- Multimedia directors for the production and dissemination of integrated visual communication formats.

Art. 4: Structure of the Training Path

The primary aim of the Itinerant Master is to provide a dual set of tools, cultural and operational:

a) essential instruments for developing a critical understanding of museographic and museological disciplines as fields of connection, dialogue, interactivity, and cooperation between Architecture–Design and Archaeology;

b) technological tools essential for mastering surveying processes (laser scanning and point-cloud processing), simulation (3D modelling, reverse modelling, and rendering), and communication (computer graphics and web design).

The educational pathway will operate according to the principle of data intersection and knowledge exchange, fostering the creation of a shared code between the design and archaeological communities.

The Master seeks to train designers capable of working for archaeology, and equally to educate archaeologists, art historians, and conservators who are fully aware of museographic design processes and strategic communication methods.

The Itinerant Master's educational pathway is structured around four core components:

- Workshops, which may be standard (lasting 7–8 days) or intensive (condensed into 3–4 days), also referred to as Mini-Workshops;
- The Continuous Seminar, comprising a bi-weekly online lecture series between March and June 2026, featuring designers, managers, curators, museum directors, and representatives of cultural heritage institutions;
- The Master's Thesis, consisting of a design project developed either on the Acropolis of Athens in conjunction with the "Paola Mattioli Prize," or at another site included in the Master's itinerary;
- Internship Experience, optional and merit-based, to be undertaken at architecture studios specialising in exhibition and cultural communication design, or at public or private institutions responsible for the protection and enhancement of archaeological heritage.

Enrolled students may attend a minimum of 3 and a maximum of 7–8 standard workshops (i.e., all workshops offered in the programme). They may also attend a minimum of 1 to a maximum of 2 intensive workshops. Non-EU students may, if interested, attend one intensive workshop online.

SUPPLEMENTARY NOTE ATTACHED TO THE ANNOUNCEMENT (dated October 19, 2025)

With reference to Articles 4 (Structure of the Training Path) and 7 (Admission Requirements, Fees, Scholarships, and Payment Procedure) of the above-mentioned Announcement for Applications, relating to the 2026-2027 edition of the Itinerant Master's Program, the following is added:

Participants enrolled in the 2026-2027 Itinerant Master's Couse may request, if they deem it appropriate and convenient for their schedules and budget, a time extension of the Training Program to be used in the following edition, 2027-2028 (*), so as to be able to spread their program over two years.

To obtain this extension, participants must proceed as follows:

- Enroll in the Master's program following up to their participation in the Piranesi Prix de Rome 2025, and therefore by October 31, 2025 (the discount received is valid for the current year).
- Send the Request for Extension by email to premio.piranesi@gmail.com by October 31, 2026, provided that:

a) the Participant has accumulated minimum 30 Award Points (see Table 2, Article 4, Page 5) by that date, which means having participated in at least two workshops and the full Continuous Seminar; or, see point d) below.

b) The Participant is regular with the first three installments due in 2026, with deadline on January 31, 2026, April 30, 2026, and July 31, 2026.

The extension also allows Participants:

c) to transfer the payment of the Master's balance to the 2027 installment, with a deadline of February 28, 2027 for those referred to in points 2 and 3 of Article 7 (fourth installment); and with deadlines of February 28, 2027 (fourth installment) and May 31, 2027 (fifth installment) for those referred to in points 4 and 5 of the same Article 7.

d) to maintain the development of the Master's Thesis (15 Award Points) in line with the 2026-2027 Master's program, and therefore to defend it in March 2027. To obtain this option, participants must have at least 30 Award Points at the date of the Master's Thesis defense (see Table 2, Article 4, Page 5), of which 10 PP refer to the Athens Workshop. Therefore, interested parties, when submitting the Request for Extension and Time Extension to be sent by 31.10.2027, will be able to communicate their intention to participate in the Athens Workshop (10 PP) to be added to another Workshop already completed (10 PP) and to the Continuous Seminar (10 PP).

With reference to what is stated in the previous point d), the Master's diploma will be issued only after the completion of the training course and that is after reaching the minimum threshold of 60 Award Points.

(*) Edition to be activated on the basis of a suitable number of applications based on the historical weighted average of the previous three editions (See the 2025 Piranesi Prix de Rome Announcement, paragraph "Prizes", page 12).
